Experience Connecticut's breathtaking fall foliage

Fall is arguably Connecticut's most beautiful season – with leaves in all corners of the state changing colors and providing one of nature's most precious beauties. The season doesn't last very long, so don't let it pass you by – take a few days and go leaf peeping! You can see beautiful views all across the state – from Litchfield Hills (most well-known for its fall foliage - the town of Kent has been ranked the number one Fall Foliage Town in New England by Yankee Magazine) to New Haven to Fairfield County – you simply can't go wrong. If you're looking to take in the leaves in the Farmington River Valley area, you must make a must stop to Talcott Mountain State Park where visitors can take in the spectacular vista in all directions from the 165-foot Heublein Tower, the former summer home of a prominent Hartford family. It's a scenic 1.25 mile hike to the tower and picnic area.

Take a walk through one of Connecticut's quaint towns

The charm of Connecticut can be found in its small towns and main streets. Explore unique shops and galleries, get immersed in the café culture and soak in the authentic life. Start your country getaway in Greenwich, the state's coastal southwest corner. Greenwich Avenue, the "Rodeo Drive of the Northeast," is packed with boutiques, jewelry stores, design showrooms, chic cafés and art galleries. Another quintessential New England town nestled along the shoreline is Guilford, which branches off from the largest town green in the state. There you can find five museums set up shop inside historic homes—including the Henry Whitfield State Museum which is the oldest stone house in New England. Located on the Connecticut River, the scenic town of Essex was Dubbed "The Perfect Small American Town" in the 1,000 Places To See Before You Die travel guide and among "The 100 Best Small Towns in America", the town offers an ideal blend of history, art, shops, restaurants, the Connecticut River Museum and much more to explore.

About The Connecticut Office of Tourism

Connecticut's Office of Tourism (COT), a division of the Department of Economic and Community Development, created the award-winning still revolutionary strategic marketing initiative to build pride among residents and bolster the state's reputation as a business and tourism destination.
